

APPENDIX A. RELEVANT LAWS, TREATIES, AND AGREEMENTS. RELEVANT LAWS, TREATIES, AND AGREEMENTS

Updated July 7, 2010

The following list of laws, treaties, agreements, and other policies are provided to facilitate use of the regional standards, including in relation to FSC Principle 1. While a reasonable effort has been made to be inclusive for laws pertaining to the U.S., the following lists should not be assumed to be exhaustive. The status of these laws and other policies are also subject to change over time. Landowners, certifiers, and other parties who are concerned with these and other policies should consult with the appropriate public agencies and private counsel. These lists neither constitute legal advice, nor obviate the need for landowners and certifiers to conduct their normal due diligence.

The lists provided below do not generally include regulations that have been written to implement these and other laws, nor do they include administrative orders, or court decisions and case law. While these regulations and decisions are as important as the treaties and laws listed below, it is not feasible to list them here. State and local policies are also too numerous and varied to list here individually. Therefore, landowners, forest managers, certifiers, and other interested parties should contact the state and county offices for the areas in which they operate. The following lists do not include laws, regulations, and other policies that pertain specifically to the management of Federal lands, other public lands, or tribal lands held in trust by the Federal government.
